

Regional Collaboration

Redwood Region RISE (Resilient Inclusive Sustainable Economy) is a growing regional collaborative of 850 people. Some of us represent local or regional organizations or businesses, while others are engaged community members.

We believe we are stronger together. That's why we—neighbors from Tribal Lands, Del Norte, Humboldt, Lake, and Mendocino Counties—are joining forces to shape our future.

The State of California is investing in our economic development. We want to hear your ideas on what our communities need to thrive economically

Stewards of Our Future

Redwood Region RISE connects residents, community leaders, grassroots organizations, businesses, workforce/economic development agencies, educational institutions, and other partners to develop regional strategies that:

- Create high-quality, regional jobs
- Grow sustainable industries
- Uplift marginalized communities

Through RRISE, collaborators strengthen relationships with local and regional partners, gain access to resources such as economic development trainings, and increase our region's competitiveness to receive future funding for sustainable economic growth.

Community Is Key

We actively center to uplift community voices and experiences that are often excluded or do not benefit from economic development efforts. We strive to bring the table to priority communities by going out locally to meet people where they are at.

These individuals represent communities who face often interconnected hardships such as poverty, disability, lack of access to household or community resources, and lack of economic or educational opportunities.

We are looking for diverse input.
Be in the conversation.
